Ethical Dilemmas in Self-Neglect and the Older Person

Self-neglecting seniors are our isolated "hidden elders". As issues of self-neglect correlate with repeat need for emergency medical services, emergency room visits, hospital readmission penalties and increased use of Medicare and insurance funds, this presentation will review the role of hospital and sub-acute rehabilitation discharge planners and case managers in assessing for environmental and self-neglect "red flags" as part of the discharge planning process. Participants will explore self-neglect as it relates to Elder Abuse, along with the issues of professional ethics in Social Work and Case Management practice; Do people have a 'right' to self-neglect?;
